Catoosa Online Academy: Retain and Regain Students

Learning... Anywhere... Anytime

The Catoosa Online Academy opened in 2013 to expand offerings to students who were seeking alternatives to the traditional high school setting or who needed a flexible schedule to stay in school.

After one year, students experienced a passing rate of 75 percent on state end-of-course exams. Based on that success, student enrollment doubled from the first semester to the second semester. Join Virtual Learning Coordinator, Kyra Rhyne, and learn how to:

- Retain struggling students or engage those that have withdrawn or fallen behind.
- Choose the right digital curriculum for your online academy.
- Blend online learning with face-to-face teacher support to improve academic performance and graduation rates.

Choosing curriculum for your blended learning environment

Magen David Yeshiva School is committed to ensuring that each of their students receives a comprehensive education emphasizing academic excellence, creativity, and intellectual curiosity. Part of that commitment is creating a personalized learning environment for each student. Last fall, after meticulously reviewing digital curriculum providers, they successfully implemented a blended learning program using Apex Learning Comprehensive Courses at their school.

If you're considering implementing blended learning in your classroom, join Michael Bitton, Director of Instructional Technology for Magen David Yeshiva, and learn:

- What to consider when choosing a quality digital curriculum.
- How to implement a successful blended learning program.
- What role the teachers plays in fostering an effective blended learning environment.
